REVIEW

The Fallen Curtain

by Ruth Rendell

BOOKSELLER RATING ★★★★★
CUSTOMER RATING ★★★★★

The short stories in The Fallen Curtain are from a crime writer at the height of her powers. Ruth Rendell employs all her spine-chilling crafts to produce a page-turner that makes the heart pound. She lays bare the twisted workings of the unbalanced mind in these tales of haunting psychological accuracy.

Awarded an Edgar by the Mystery Writers of America

From the press

- ★ "Suspense at its best" The Times
- ★ "One of the best inventors of plots since Agatha Christie" Daily Telegraph
- ★ "Ruth Rendell is at the top of her class" The Observer
- ★ "Rendell transcends the mystery genre and achieves something almost sublime" Los Angeles Times

SYNOPSIS	READERS' REVIEWS	ORDERING
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Lisa fears for her life when she meets her exact double, the sensuous, manipulative Zoe. But Lisa's fiancé, Peter, becomes obsessed with Zoe, risking his savings and his sanity for her. The Possible A cautious woman's desire for security within her home is tested to the extreme by a roommate who often leaves the doors unlocked, which leads to sinister consequences. You can't be too careful A suburban couple has an exciting, charismatic new friend, Reeve, a writer whose behavior toward them soon becomes both violent and sinister. People Don't do such thing Sometimes mothers are not maternal. They reject their children. Here the mother-daughter relationship is disastrously played out. The Vinegar Mother A quiet-living, modest man rescues a young woman from suicide and goes on to marry her, only to become a victim of her obsessive possessiveness. The Clinging Woman A stranger lures 8-year-old Richard into his car with the promise of candy. At age 18 he is still haunted by the incident but remembers nothing until he revisits the site and the curtain lifts. The Fallen Curtain
